Buy-side corporate development

THE PROBLEM

Building corp dev in-house runs $500,000 to $1,500,000 a year.

Most buyers do not have a corporate development function.
Standing one up is the expensive way to find that out.

- All-in, not just salary — and it is a fixed cost attached to an activity that only happens occasionally.
- It does not scale down between deals. The function is idle and the cost is not.
- Most banks are built for the sell side. A buy-side search is a different job.

Targets under $250M revenue. Buy-side only – THE LINE, smbX practice perimeter.

THE ENGAGEMENT

smbXCorpDev

Thesis to close. The whole buy-side function, run for you.

- 1 Thesis — what to buy, and whether it is buyable today.
- 2 Sourcing — the owners who are not looking to sell, reached under your name.
- 3 Evaluation — financials rebuilt, every adjustment tested, surprises found early.
- 4 Structure & offer — terms a lender will back. We write it and we negotiate it.
- 5 Diligence & close — where deals come apart. Every thread held to signing.

One buyer per target. Never the sell side – it is in the engagement letter.

THE UPGRADE

smbXCorpDev Premium

Everything above. Then the part most advisors skip.

- 6 Integration — the first hundred days, planned before close. You keep the people and the customers you just paid for.
- 7 Value creation — we stay past day 100: the thesis tracked, the levers pulled, the add-ons sourced.

Premium is the same team staying in the deal after the wire clears.
